Lights go out in Didsbury Saturday

BY JOHN GLEESON
Review Staff

Almost 1600 FortisAlberta customers in Didsbury and rural Olds lost power Saturday night due to a broken distribution line off Highway 2A, half a mile south of Olds.

The break was witnessed by county resident Jenny Baptist, who was driving east down Twp. Rd. 324 when she saw a flash at the top of a power pole.

"There was a bright light and a bang and sparks going everywhere," Baptist said.

"I was on the phone with my mom and said, 'Um, something's happening.'"

Baptist called 911 and reported the incident, and emergency crews responded within minutes but were unable to immediately locate the broken line on or off the gravel road. It was Jenny's father Brian, who had driven up from Didsbury with wife Brenda after hearing about the incident from his daughter, who finally spotted the broken line curled over the bank of community mailboxes immediately south of the Olds College property.

The line break knocked out power for the east half of Didsbury from 9:12 p.m. to 9:50 p.m., said Fortis communications director Jennifer MacGowan.

"We switched what we could as quickly as possible to get the majority of customers back on as quickly as possible," MacGowan said.

About 110 rural customers remained offline until 11:30 p.m., when power was restored.

"We believe, but we are not exactly sure, that it may have been a goose that caused it," MacGowan said. "It's one of those fluke things that happen."

Jenny Baptist confirmed that suspicion, saying the next day she drove by the site and saw a dead goose lying in a pool of water and "feathers everywhere."

MacGowan said Fortis had installed bird markers on the line that came down.

"Bird markers are orange reflective markers, which make the line more visible to birds and help reduce collisions between 60 and 90 per cent," she said. "In this case, the power went off later in the evening when it was dark so the goose would not have seen the marker."

Library offers direction with growing trend: eBooks

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

A waiting list has already started and continues to grow at the Didsbury Municipal Library for people wanting to try out different eBook readers.

The readers, electronic devices that allow a person to download books and other documents to read, have taken off in popularity.

Last April the library started offering e-downloads and there were a total of 391 for all of Parkland Regional Library system. Of the 391, 373 were of e-audio books, explained Inez Kosinski, Didsbury library director. By December of 2010 there were 1,109 downloads, of which only 376 were audio books.

"The use of the ebook is growing dramatically," wrote Kosinski in an e-mail. "The total for 2010 was 6,143. The trend continues in 2011, with the first three months showing total downloads of 4,334."

Now, the library is also loaning out the readers, for people interested in trying out the technology.

"Some people are hesitant to try it because they think, 'there goes the print,'" said Donna Christensen who's been organizing the launch of the readers. "But it's just a different format, like audio books."

With donations from the Friends of the Library, Christensen was able to purchase three different readers that are compatible with loaning books from the library: the Sony, the Kobo and Aluratek. Right now between three and four people are on the wait-list for each device. And with a three-week loan period, some people are patiently waiting their chance to try out the new toys.

"I haven't loaned any books yet but I definitely will once I get used to using it and once the selection builds up a bit more," explained Lee-Anne Akister from Didsbury, a recent convert to the readers. She said she downloaded the Kobo app to her Smartphone and has started downloading books that way.

"I prefer the paper books but it's nice to have if I'm out or in a waiting room somewhere where I don't have my book with me," she said.

While some are hesitant to shift from the traditional paper-bound copy to the electronic hand-held version, Christensen said others are reaping the benefits.

"All my books are on here so I don't have to worry about forgetting it at home, or leaving it at work. It fits in my purse and I always have it on me," she said as one example of its benefit.

But she also hopes the readers can benefit seniors, who need large print books to read. She said one complaint she typically hears when visiting the Lodge, is the large print books are too heavy to hold. The toys, small and light, have the ability for readers to choose the font size, and Christensen hopes to motivate some of the seniors to make the switch.

"This is just a different format to access to information."

The library currently offers 700 ebooks to loan. Kosinski said their plan is to introduce 200 new ebooks a year for the next four years.

Show breaks attendance record Saturday

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review staff

The Didsbury Art, Travel and Trade Expo broke records Saturday when 2,500 people came through the doors.

"Saturday we had the busiest times we've ever had," said Deana Campbell, office manager for the Didsbury and District Chamber of Commerce. "Sunday slowed down a little bit but overall it was a successful weekend."

The show hosted in total 3,500 people from Didsbury and area out to see the 165 booths set up and entertainment offered.

She said the feedback was positive from both exhibitors and viewers. "I think the fiddlers were a great success again. The room was jam-around," said Lola Hunford, who drove down from Innisfail Sunday to check out the exhibits. "It's much larger than the one in Innisfail ... it's a great way to see what's happening in the area," she said.

Kerri Tisdale, with Grandma's Attic, came down from Red Deer to set up a booth for the first time.

"I used to live in Carstairs so I came out this year to let my old clients know I'm still doing this. ... I've been to a lot of trade shows around Alberta and I really like this one — it's really well lit and there's a lot of room for people to move around." Tisdale said she heard about the Expo online and plans to return next year.

"I think the Scouts walking around selling coffee was a really nice touch," she said.

Wild Rose Liberal candidate apologizes following radio comments

BY DAN SINGLETON
Review staff

Wild Rose Liberal candidate John Reilly, a retired judge, has apologized for comments he made on a Calgary radio show.

In a one-on-one interview on QR77, Reilly cited an example of a case he said did not warrant a lengthy jail sentence.

The case involved an offender jailed for the sexual touching of a woman without her consent.

"I don't think in those circumstances that what happened there should put that young man in a penitentiary for three years," Reilly reportedly told radio host Dave Rutherford.

"This is one of my problems with the criminal justice system the way it is, is that I say we put too much emphasis on the offence and not enough emphasis on the offender.

"If you're looking at what the Conservative government wants to do is say if this is the offence, you go to jail. And that's going to put people in jail that don't need to be there."

At no time during the interview did Reilly condone sexual assault.

There are four candidates running in Wild Rose: Reilly, Conservative incumbent Blake Richards, NDP challenger Jeff Horvath and Green Party candidate Mike MacDonald.

On Thursday the Liberal Party released the following statement on Reilly's behalf:

"I unreservedly apologize for the clumsy example I used during my remarks last week on the Rutherford Show. I deeply regret any distress they may have caused and any misunderstanding about my own — and my party's — zero tolerance for sexual assault of any kind.

"I want to make explicitly clear that I believe that all sexual assaults should be prosecuted and the guilty individuals should be subject to sanctions."

Conservative incumbent Blake Richards says the Liberals should drop Reilly as the Wild Rose candidate over the comments.

"I think the big thing is that the comments were totally unacceptable," said Richards. "I was surprised he wasn't dropped. Sexual assaults are very serious crimes and there has to be serious consequences. It seems to be a common thing among Liberals, that they put the rights of criminals before the rights of victims."

Richards said he believes sanctions for all sexual assaults should be substantial.

"The key for me is with sexual assaults there has to be serious consequences. That's a crime that leave scars on the victims and they are often permanent scars," he said.

NDP Wild Rose candidate Jeff Horvath said: "He apologized and I'd say that was an appropriate thing to do."

Asked if he believes

Reilly should resign as a candidate, Horvath said, "I guess that's up to the Liberal Party."

Regarding sexual assault punishment, Horvath said: "Of course I'm a supporter of punishment for criminal activities, including sexual assault."

Green Party candidate MacDonald provided the following comment:

"I believe the Green Party represents a new kind of politics that does not resort to personal attacks on another candidate. While I am concerned about Mr. Reilly's comments, they should be evaluated by individual voters. I would encourage people to listen to the interview and speak to Mr. Reilly to make an informed decision as to his intent and meaning.

"As the Green Party candidate I will remain focused on communicating our long-term vision for our country as we work towards building a strong future for our children."

In an interview with this newspaper on Saturday, Reilly said he has no intention of resigning as the Liberal candidate in Wild Rose.

"I'm not commenting on that and I'm not going back there," said Reilly. "I think they (Conservatives) took what I said and misrepresented it and then attacked the misrepresentation. They took what I said out of context. It was a mistake to use the example I used."

Tri-transportation Project almost ready

BY SYLVIA COLE
Review Staff

A shuttle service aimed at getting people to appointments outside of Didsbury is almost ready to begin, said committee coordinators.

The service, the Tri-Transportation Project, started as an idea in February 2010 when FCSS coordinators in Didsbury, Carstairs and Cremona recognized a need for a low cost shuttle service for people in town without proper transportation.

"There's definitely cries from mental health workers who need to get clients to appointments," said Jolene Leutschaft of Didsbury FCSS, as an example.

The committee, formed of members of FCSS workers from all three communities, Didsbury Mental Health and Didsbury Hospital Social Work Program partnered with Rockyview Regional Handibus Society which has offered to provide services into the three areas for the first two years.

Robbin Bowman, chair of the project, said they need $25,000 and are $7,400 shy of reaching the first third of the money. She said once they secure the $10,000 they'll have enough to get started. Representatives from the RRHS told Bowman that's all the committee will need to get the buses running.

The project has received donations of $5,000, $6,600, and $6,000 from the Rosebud Foundation, Carstairs Community Chest and Cremona Lions, respectively, said Bowman.

"The service provider has let us know that they know that they need to get this going to get momentum going," Bowman said.

"We feel and they feel that once it gets running, that will help propel more funding to come in."

Bowman said her group has applied for grants to help fund the project.

"We're not leaving any stone unturned," Bowman added.

"We're just starting to get responses back from some of our grant applications."

So far, the money raised has been through grants and donations and the group said once it gets started, it hopes to remain self-sustainable.

"We just recently sent out a letter to different groups within the community who maybe didn't know what was happening... we're trying to get more community groups on board... any support people can give we're absolutely open to," said Leutschaft.

The Didsbury Lions were one group approached by the Tri-Transportation group. They also run a shuttle service three days a week and offer door-to-door services to anyone in town that requests it. Their service is strictly in-town only. Offering their bus to the group to get started was an idea tossed around.

The Lions' handibus is a significant drain on the club with approximately $22,000 going towards the upkeep and maintenance of the bus, as well as fuel, insurance and the cost to pay drivers. Being able to help the Tri-Transportation group with a set of wheels was suggested as an offer back in November, and something the club said it would still be interested in looking at.

The Tri-Transportation Committee can't say for certain when it will get that last chunk of funding but has already shaved $6,000 down from the total it held just two weeks ago.

"We need to make sure we have the money, the funding to go through with everything. We have eager committee members, we have Rocky handibus members ready to go. It now sits on the funding we're waiting for," said Leutschaft.

New area structure plan gets first reading

Council approved first reading of a new area structure plan for the development of Copperview Landing, a proposed subdivision planned for the northeast section of town. Westwinds Land Development Inc. and Brown and Associates have partnered to develop the area structure plan that takes up approximately 65 hectares of land in the recently annexed land adjacent to Mountain View County. A public hearing will be held later this month.

Council agrees on fee cap

Council passed an amendment to a current franchise fee bylaw to set a cap at 20 per cent. Currently, council has agreed to have a seven per cent franchise fee with Fortis Alberta, an increase from five per cent last year. The increased fee, that will appear on electrical bills starting in March will result in a $12.61 increase per year for the average consumer. In total the town will take in $117,470 in revenue, $49,739 more than what the town would receive if council decided to remain at five per cent.

Borrowing approved for development

Council authorized a loan from the Alberta Capital Finance Authority to finance the development of Shanz Crossing at an estimated $1.7 million. "We're trying to nail down what type of design will be best suited to make sure we have the absorption for the costs," said CFO Kynan Larson to council last week. He said the estimates are for the first phase of the development, to cover studies, engineering and on- and off-site costs. Exact costs and sizes of lots are still on hold while council waits on a few details, explained Brian Wittal, mayor, after the meeting. "The rail access will influence the layout," he said, explaining the town's waiting to hear if it can use a spur line for access into the Crossing. "We don't know the final dollar amount for infrastructure because we're waiting on a few details. But we have the funding in place and can draw from there."

Wait-time improvements good news for all Albertans

DAN SINGLETON

Wait-time improvements good news for all Albertans

News that wait times at Alberta hospitals are on the downswing is good news for patients, their families and health-care providers – and perhaps proof that the general public can sometimes still have an impact on government action.

Last week, Alberta Health Services announced that wait times in many hospitals have dropped off in recent days, reversing a troubling trend that had been building over the past several years.

Concern voiced by residents across the province over increasing wait times in emergency rooms last fall and early this year prompted Alberta Health Services to implement steps to address those worries.

Those measures included a number of good investments in the vital health system provincewide:

- Adding 1,300 continuing care beds by the end of March, additional capacity AHS says has allowed the freeing up of hospital beds currently occupied by patients whose health needs are better served in a long-term care facility or a supportive living environment.

- Adding 360 new hospital beds by the end of March. Those beds include surge capacity beds, as well as transition beds, detox beds, hospice beds, and Medical Assessment Units that reduce pressures in emergency departments.

- Informing patients about their care options because, Alberta Health said, some health needs are best met in places other than a hospital emergency department, places such as a family doctor's office or an urgent care centre.

- And increasing home care spending in an effort to keep seniors in their homes and reduce the number of avoidable emergency visits.

"We have emphasized the importance of tackling wait times — not just in emergency departments, but everywhere we can provide care," said Alberta Health Services' acting CEO Dr. Chris Eagle.

"We've implemented new protocols to provide additional surge capacity when demand on emergency departments and across the health system reaches critical thresholds."

And although Alberta Health Services has not yet reached its benchmark goals when it comes to overall ER waiting times — four hours from triage to discharge for patients who do not need hospital admission, and eight hours from triage to bed placement for patients who require hospital admission — the latest news is good news for patients and their families.

At a time when federal politicians are fighting it out with attack ads, recriminations and mudslinging, it's nice to see the Stelmach government and its health-care partners listening to public concerns and taking positive action.

Perhaps federal leaders could take a lesson or two from their provincial counterparts and try listening to public concerns and input for a change? Then again, maybe that's too much to ask.

Deteriorating sidewalks need repairs

The so-called sidewalk — just up the street from the town office (19th Ave.) has deteriorated so bad that it is down to GRAVEL! There's no concrete left to walk on and when I went by I noticed a disabled person trying to shovel his walk and observed the so-called sidewalk that has been shovelled, is now on his boulevard because by the town bylaw standards one is supposed to shovel their walk in front of the house. I beg to ask council, "If there is no sidewalk left why shovel it?"

I went to the town office to ask when are they going to fix this sidewalk as it has been this way for over five years now with many, many complaints by the residents to the town office about the problem. Their response was, "it is not in the budget this year." Is council waiting for someone to fall on this uneven, messed up so-called sidewalk so they can put the blame on the owners in front of it? I cannot believe council's blindness to what is a priority and what is on their books — i.e.: purchase more land and ignore what are the here-and-now issues!

I noticed that the sidewalk repairs stopped after the elections were over.

Laverne Guertin
Didsbury

P.S. — Ignoring the concerns of the taxpayers is why we write letters to the editor!

It doesn't take long to vote

Do you have 8.4 seconds a day to assist in running one of the freest countries in the world? Eight point four seconds to engage in a process that at times seems useless but remains extremely important to our way of life?

Around the world we see people in nations like Tunisia, Egypt, the Ivory Coast and Libya all rising up in the name of democracy. Young and old alike are rising up, standing side by side for free and democratic elections. Here in Canada many of us just don't seem to share that same passion for freedoms or responsibility.

How much time does it really take? Here is the quick look at the time commitment required to vote. In the average life time most people end up with about 60 years of voting eligibility. Historically, on average in Canada, we hold an election every 3.5 years. That translates into being able to vote in 17 Federal elections.

In Canada the government requires employers to ensure individuals have three consecutive hours on Election Day to be able to vote. Let's use three hours as the standard amount of time it takes to vote. In fact it takes MUCH less time, but this will allow time for you to drive to and from the polls, educate yourself on the issues and likely still have time left over.

In 17 possible elections in which to vote; at 3 hours per election that is a grand total of 51 hours in your lifetime for voting in Federal elections.

We have already established that you have about 60 years of voting eligibility and 51 hours over those 60 years which equals 0.85 hours per year which equates to only 51 minutes per year.

Multiply 51 minutes/year by 60 seconds/minute and we end up with 3,060 seconds per year. Finally take the 3,060 seconds/year and divide it by 365 days and we end up with the amount of time it takes us per day to have OUR voice in the running of our free and democratic country.

8.4 Seconds is all it takes per day to have our say.

People all around the world are fighting for something that only costs us 8.4 seconds of each day. It takes more time per day to decide what coffee to have then it does to "exercise" our democratic freedoms.

Now you do have the right to not vote just as much as I have the right to vote. In fact the argument could be made that our grandfathers fought just as hard for your right not to vote as my right to vote. Our system is not perfect, nor are the political leaders or parties, but our voting is worth it. Just ask those who can't.

Call me crazy but it seems very strange to me that we would not capitalize on an 8.4 seconds/day time investment to exercise our voice in this great free and democratic land we know and love called Canada. Unless you are an MP voting may be your ONLY chance to have a voice in Ottawa.

This May 2nd take the time and Vote. It's worth the time.

Didsbury residents enjoy a soak in the hot tub Sunday during the pool's grand re-opening. The pool was closed for the last three months for renovations.

Pool reopens to public

BY SYLVIA COLE

Ross Ford students were busy making waves yesterday at the Memorial Complex as swimming classes started up again.

The grand opening Sunday afternoon brought people through the doors for their first swim in Didsbury in over three months.

"We're excited to be open and offering our programs once again," said Nicole Aasen, manager of community services who said swim lessons, fitness classes and boot camps are all up and running again.

Despite a last minute fumble last week that almost delayed the pool's reopening, the repairs to the facility ran smoothly, she explained.

"The hard thing about this project is it's not hit you in the face when you walk in the door," she said of the replacement to the new HVAC system. The system controls the heating, ventilation and the air conditioning in the building and reduces the humidity that was deteriorating some of the other equipment in the building, including the waterslide tower that has been sandblasted and repainted.

Staff were also busy working on new murals and repainting areas all over the complex.

"There's some visible stuff but the big changes is how the building is going to operate as a whole."

Aasen said a few staff members did leave over the last couple of months and there will be some new faces at the pool.

"Some have moved to different communities. I don't think it was the result of the shutdown. We were able to keep everybody employed busy and keep them at the same level of employment throughout the shutdown."

Margaret Baril explains the Wellness Challenge to a group of participants at the Didsbury Memorial Complex Tuesday evening.

Didsbury kicks off wellness challenge

BY SYLVIA COLE
 Review Staff

Close to 100 people showed up to join the community's Wellness Challenge, now into its second year at the Memorial Complex last Tuesday.

Numbers totalled 80 at the end of Monday night, down from last year's 178 participants but leaders are certain the number will rise as the weeks continue.

"Last year out of the 178 registrants 40 specified when they registered they just wanted the pedometers and wouldn't be doing the classes," said Margaret Baril, clinical pharmacist and one of the coordinators. "Another 40, must have been their intention as well because we didn't have over 80 people at the speakers for any one week," she said. "The enthusiasm builds as people go out and talk to their friends and they say, oh I wish I joined," she explained.

The challenge, launched by Primary Health Network, has participants from Carstairs and Didsbury listen in on seminars about healthy eating, fitness and stress, while encouraging them to get active and eat right. People can earn points for prizes, depending on how well they do.

This year, they've also incorporated half-hour sessions at the beginning of each week that introduce participants to different activities offered within the two communities such as yoga or funky fitness.

"I'm looking forward to the Zumba," said Diana Osterdal from Didsbury, joining the challenge for the first time. "I've heard a lot about it and want to know more."

Osterdal and her friend, Darlene Loney, were drawn to the course because of the coverage on both health and fitness.

"It's not just about losing weight, it's an overall look at incorporating a healthier lifestyle," said Osterdal of what caught her attention.

"Overall it looks like a good motivator — with a different topic each week there's always something to come out for," said Loney.

The kickoff night had stations set up for people to get their measurements and blood pressure taken and also get fitted for their pedometer. A welcome session on how the weeks would progress was also set up.

"We were really pleased with how it turned out," said Baril, who explained that last year the room was packed as people stood in line to have everything done at once. This year they were able to space out each activity into different stations to allow people to move around.

The challenge runs every Tuesday night at the Memorial Complex in Didsbury. Baril said registrants are still able to come out tonight and sign up at 6 p.m.

"We won't turn anyone away, so if they come early in the evening at six, we can get it started before the activities get started for them," she said.

Pedestrian struck

A Bowden man was charged with unsafe backing after hitting a 19-year-old Didsbury woman late last week.

The woman, walking her dog past Fountain Tire stopped when her dog got into a fight with another dog.

Police said her back was turned away from a Chrysler 300 that was backing out of a stall and bumped her, knocking her over.

The female continued walking to the post office when police and ambulance arrived. She was taken to Didsbury hospital to be checked over and was released without injury.

The incident occurred shortly before 5 p.m. Thursday afternoon. Police said the incident was not a hit and run and the male driver was compliant with the police.

Both Didsbury RCMP and fire department responded to a call southwest of the hamlet of Wescott last Wednesday afternoon. A 2002 silver Dodge Ram that was stolen out of the 900 block of Ross Street in Crossfield earlier this month was found on a gas well lease site. All that remained of the vehicle was a smouldering burnt-out shell. The fire department was called to help locate any evidence.

Truck nabbed

A stolen truck from Calgary was recovered from Olds Monday morning after the owner of the vehicle called police to report a missing white F350.

The owner was able to track the movement of the vehicle via GPS and called police with directions. The GPS had a four-minute time delay. The truck was followed through Airdrie, Didsbury and finally discovered at the Co-op cardlock at the intersection of Highway 2 and 27. Police attempted to block off the road but two men driving a different white F350 with a trailer pulling a black car evaded the closure and headed east on Highway 27. The pursuit was terminated for safety reasons.

Ethel Ryckman, Maureen McTavish and Sharon Barefoot get ready to pack over 50 Izzy Dolls in luggage heading down to Guatemala. Barefoot and Ryckman knitted the dolls with friends Lou Jacobs, Ima Hilderbrandt and Jene Waite.

Volunteers reach out to children

BY SYLVIA COLE
Reveille Staff

A group of Didsbury women has stitched, stuffed and shipped over 50 hand-made dolls to children in Guatemala.

"It's very rewarding to see the pictures of the children and see their smiling faces," said Ethel Ryckman, one of the volunteers with the Didsbury Hospital Ladies Auxiliary.

The group, who volunteer their time and raise money for Units 3 and 4 at the hospital came across the Izzy Doll pattern last year.

The pattern - a simple doll design knitted together and stuffed - was created in 1994 as a gift to give to children who don't have much in wartorn countries.

The group, who are always using their skills to make shawls, pillows or anything comfortable, wanted to find the right home for the brightly coloured cuddly toys.

Maureen McTavish's daughter, a doctor out of Salmon Arm, B.C., was heading to Guatemala as part of Doctors in Action and suggested bringing the dolls for the children.

"They were stuffed into the suitcases and used to pad their belongings," laughed Sharon Barefoot at the thought of the dolls poking out from the luggage.

"The children can't get hurt from them, they're easy to wash, they're just so soft, safe and cuddly. And can be loved by boys or girls."

The dolls went to a hospital and orphanage in Patzun, Guatemala and a stack of photos that came back with McTavish showed kids carrying their new dolls everywhere.

Five women were responsible for putting the dolls together, but the auxiliary agrees it was a joint effort to hunt down yarn and stuffing from thrift stores for material.

"This volunteer group is doing something to benefit people elsewhere in the world," said Dawna Faryna, volunteer coordinator for Didsbury District Health Services. "It's a small contribution but it says a lot. This auxiliary isn't just helping out with health-care needs here, but elsewhere in the world. I think that's special in itself."

The group has been noticed in the past for its volunteer efforts. From 2006 to 2010 the women have won provincial recognition from the Alberta Auxiliary Health Care Association for their innovative crafts or their support to the hospital during a photo contest each year. They also won two awards at a national level in 2006 and 2008.

"They've done a lot to contribute to the community and I think the ladies are great role models to represent Didsbury," said Faryna.

The group is submitting a photo of the dolls for the provincial photo contest this year and is hopeful but humble about the results.

"It's the camaraderie," said Barefoot of what keeps her volunteering. "When I look around the table I feel I'm amongst friends."
